Making in average of $14,945 per mile.

"The above estimates, based upon contracts," adds the same exhibit, " is given with entire confidence, as abundant cash means to complete and equtp the road." The President, also, adds in the sune exhibit: "The capital stock of the Computy, authorized by law, is $2,000,000, and may be increased when desired; but this will not be needed until adouble truck is required" Now, between the cost of the road and its equipment, by the estimates of 1854, and the first estimate of 1852, there is the vast difference of orice of labor." Assuming that these are the true grounds of the increased cost, it would certainly have been more satisfactory to stockolders to have had the figures bearing upon them. No such figures are given, and it seems to be the design of the President to deal in generals when we want particulars. But let us look at this statement, and test its probable correct-1. If I mistake not, the great advance in iron had taken place before the estimate of 1853 was made. The "sudden advance" took place in 1852. The cost of the iron for the Toledo, Norhave been bought at very low figures, was $36.76 per ton in New York. The cost of the iron for the Ohio & Indiana Road, by the 2nd estimate of Mr. Straughan, "based on contracts," as he says, was $66.66 per ton, an advance of near $30 open the low prices of the previous year. If, for ny cause, the actual cost of iron has exceeded Ir. Straughan's est mate, it should have been stated in figures. My belief has been that the iron for the Ohio & Ind'ana Read was really contracted for at from $65 to $70 per ton: if I am wrong, I would like to know it. But supposing thas cost $10 per ten more than the est mate, bringing the cost to $76.66 per ton, this would not make a difference of $1,000 per mile on the cost of the road. assuming the amount of iron required to be, assuming the amount of iron

No previous report or are so. It is plain to the different distance that every stimate has hinted at a cost of over $2,000,000, dollar of radread capital, unwisely or improped in the report of Mr. Stranghan, Chief Engineer, by expended, is so much enjustly taken from the lated February 2d, 1852, he thus estimates the induis of tockholders. Every dollar of expense talls upon the value of the stock and the dividence of stockholders. No ra bond, however good its post or or valuable its Lusiness, can prove prefitable without faithful, and economical, and wise menagement. It is the right and duty of every stockholder to know what becomes of his money. If vigilance be the price of liberty, it is equally the source of pecuniary profits. The directors of a corporation are but a fraction of it; their real uterest in its affairs is often far less than that of the other stockholders; they should therefore bes made to feel that the racts will be well considered and their accountability not overlooked by their constituents; above all things, if they have u clean record, they should not be afraid to show it.

The above remarks are made not to assail the nanagoment of the Ohio & Indiana Road, but to elicit informations in which others than myse f have a deep concern. All things may have been done wisely and well, but, it seems to me we need other assurances of that fact than the President's report for 1854. That is so much at

> The State has punctually paid the interests on the bonds, thrown upon the revenue, since the arrangement was made, and will every ensuing year be more able to eo so. The improvements os the State, as well as population are yearly increasing, and by the sale of other public works a considerable amount, in bonds, constituting a part of the public debt, has already been paid. A law has also been enacted authorizing the Treasurer of State to appropriate any unexpended balance in the treasury, not otherwise appropriated, to the redemption of outstanding bonds, and the people are beginning to look anxiously to the day when the public debt of Indiana shall be fully discharged. Under the arrangement with her creditors most of the holders of Indiana State bonds have come forward and taken advantage of its provisions: but comparatively few of the original bonds of the State are now in existence, and these, it is understood, are mostly in a condition, in Europe, not to be reached, their ownership being in lit gation in the chancery courts, or they are held by infant heirs.
